13.1 – Dig deeper

Congratulations! If you've read all the chapters and scrolled through the numerous comments in each chapter, then that means that you don't have a passing interest in stock markets but rather a genuine interest to learn and profit from the market.

I guess you are now warmed up to dig deeper!

The objective of the first module is to give you a quick hands-on introduction to the stock markets. In our endeavor to introduce the stock markets, we have carefully selected concepts you need to know, especially if you are new to markets. At this point, it is a good sign if you have many unanswered questions. You will find your answers as we proceed to other modules.

Before we proceed further, you need to understand why we have so many different learning modules and how these modules are interrelated. Here are some of the modules that we will cover in Varsity.

1. Introduction to Stock Markets
2. Technical analysis
3. Fundamental Analysis
4. Futures Trading
5. Option Theory
6. Option Strategies
7. Markets & Taxation
8. Currency, Commodity, and Govt Securities
9. Risk Management & Trading Philosophy
10. Trading Systems
11. Personal Finance (Mutual Funds)
12. Integrated Financial Modelling

Apart from these, we will add other modules on the go.

13.2 – So many modules, how are they interrelated?

The idea of ‘Varsity at Zerodha’ is to create a repository of high-quality market-related educational content. The content will cover fundamental analysis, technical analysis, derivatives, trading strategies, risk management, financial modeling, etc. Each main topic is categorized as a module. So think of a module as reading a book with several chapters within.

You may wonder how each topic fits within the grand scheme. To help you get a perspective, let me ask you a question. To be successful in the markets, what, according to you, is the single most important factor? Success in markets is easily defined – if you make money consistently, you are successful, and if you don’t, you are not!

So if you were to answer this question for me, chances are you would think about risk management, discipline, market timing, access to information, etc., as the key to success in markets. While one cannot deny the importance of these factors, developing a point of view (POV) is even more compelling and primary.

A point of view is the art of developing a sense of direction on a stock or the index. If you think the stock is going up, your POV is bullish; hence you would be a buyer of the stock. Likewise, if you think a stock is going down, your POV is bearish; you would be a stock seller. Without a POV, you won’t know what to do in the market. Once you develop a POV, you add other elements like risk management, timing, macro & micro factors, etc., to improve the odds of your trade, but without a POV, you just can't get started. For that reason, I'd consider developing POV as the most important factor.

Having said that, how do you develop a point of view? How do you figure out if the stock is going up or down?

One needs to develop a systematic approach to analyze the markets to develop a point of view. A few methods are using which you can figure out/ analyze what to buy or sell. They are:

1. Fundamental Analysis (FA)
2. Technical Analysis (TA)
3. Quantitative Analysis (QA)
4. Outside views

To give you a preview, here is a typical illustration of a trader's thought process while developing a POV (whether to buy or sell stocks) based on a particular method of analysis –

FA-based POV – The company's quarterly numbers look impressive. The company has reported a 25% top-line and 15% bottom-line growth. The company's guidance also looks positive. With all the fundamental factors aligned, the stock looks bullish; hence the stock is a buy.

TA-based POV – The MACD indicator has turned bullish along with a bullish engulfing candlestick pattern; the stock is also trading at its support point, with that study, its short-term sentiment looks positive; therefore, the stocks are a buy.

QA-based POV – With the recent up move, the stock's price to earnings (PE) touched the 3rd standard deviation. There is only a 1% chance for the PE to breach the 3rd standard deviation. Hence, it is prudent to expect a reversion to mean the stock is a sell.

Outside view – The analyst on TV recommends a buy on the stock; therefore, the stock is a buy.

The POV you take should always be based on your own analysis rather than an outsider's view, as more often than not, one regrets taking action based on an outside view.

So after developing a POV, what does one generally do? Does the straightaway go and trade the point of view? Here is where the complexity of markets starts to kick in.

If the POV is bullish, you can choose to do one of the following:

1. Buy the stock in the spot market.
2. Buy the stock in the derivatives markets.
 - a. Within derivatives, you can choose to buy the futures.
 - b. Or choose to trade via the options market.
 - i. Within the options market, there are call options and put options.
 - ii. You can combine call and put options to create a synthetic bullish trade.

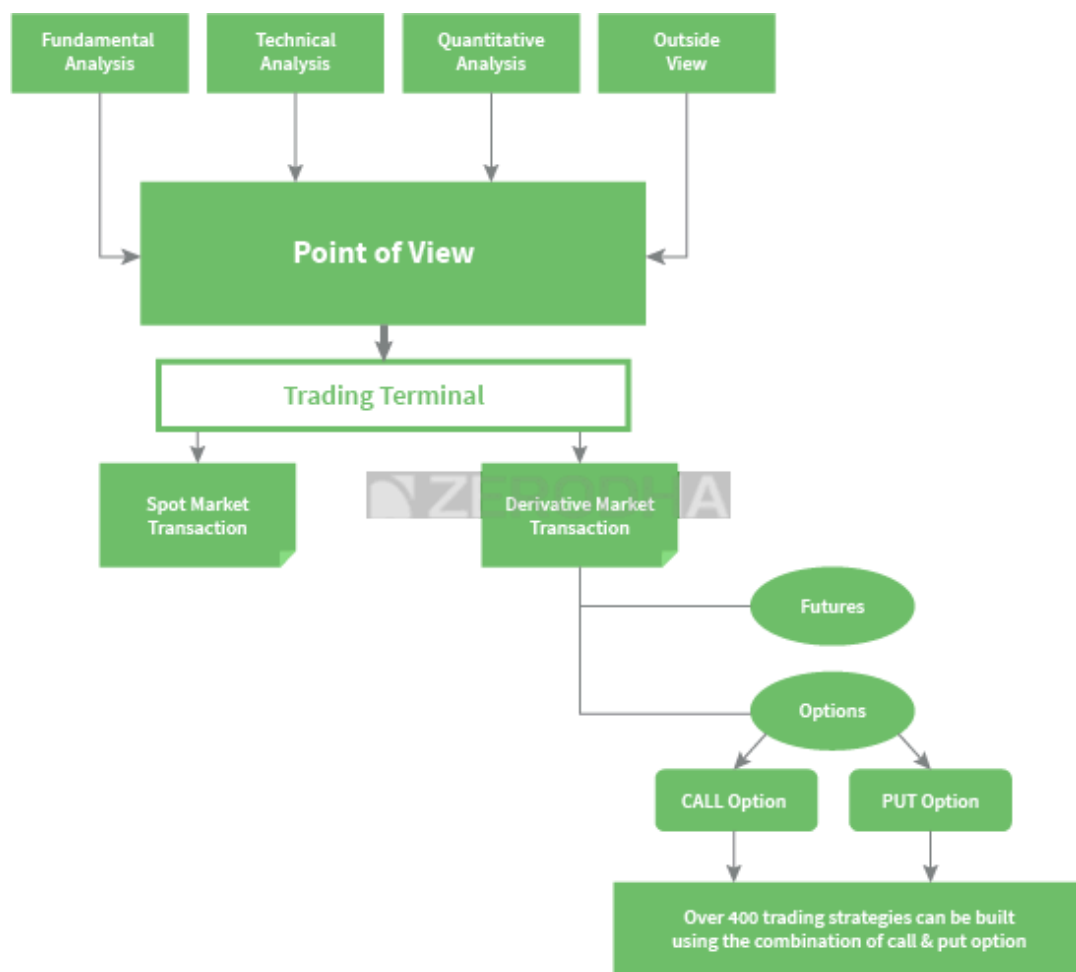

So what you choose to do after developing a POV is a different ball game. Choosing the right instrument to trade that complements your POV is critical to profitable trading.

For example, if I'm extremely bullish on the stock from a 1-year perspective, I'm better off making a delivery trade. However, if I'm out rightly bullish on the stock from a short-term perspective (say one week), I'd rather choose a futures instrument to trade.

If I'm bullish with constraints attached (for example – I'm expecting the markets to bounce because of a great budget announcement, but I don't want to risk much), it would be prudent to choose an option instrument.

So the message here is – the market participant should develop a point of view and complement the POV with the right trading instrument. A well-researched POV combined with the right instrument to trade is a perfect recipe for market success.

Also, by now, hopefully, you have got a sense of how all the different modules in “Varsity” play an important role in assimilating the market.

So keeping this in the background, go ahead and explore the content on Varsity at Zerodha.

The next two modules will explore concepts that will help us develop POV based on Technical and Fundamental Analysis.

After reading through these two modules, you will get a sense of developing a point of view on markets. In the later modules, we will discuss the different trading instruments you can choose to complement your perspective. As we progress, we will ramp up the flow to help you start calibrating your trades with effective risk management techniques.

Let's roll!

Sir I have a question on the video you have shared on “What is inflation and what causes it”. Now you say that the central bank issues certain government bonds to cover up for the fiscal deficit. But when there are liquidity crunch the central bank buys these bonds prematurely from banks and the banks get flooded with liquidity. Here my doubt is whether these bonds at the first place are sold to banks or to public ? If it is sold to public then how can central bank buy it from banks? Please explain.

Replyo Karthik Rangappa says:April 16, 2026 at 2:13 pm

Some of these bonds are directly issued to banks, Sujit.

Thanks

Replyo Karthik Rangappa says:March 23, 2026 at 1:04 pm

QA is quantitative based point of view. BASically you develop view on where the market/stock will move based on quantitative approach.

Great content, Karthik. I really loved the way the course contents are structured. I have a question- My plan is to do both Trading and Investing – Trading for income and Investing for wealth creation. What do you think of my approach towards Trading & Investing? Please advise.

Thanks Sharath.

While I do have a high conviction on Investing for wealth creation, cant say the same about Trading for income. Trading is a tricky game and only few master it well. Give it a shot, but be prepared to pull the plug if you dont see it going well for you.

Hey Karthik, your content is very nice to read, I had a question, as a student in 1st year, I thought of testing the waters of Derivatives through options and futures but now I feel overwhelmed by the sheer amount of TA and FA required to do that and underexperienced to do the same, what should be my ideal strategy, consider myself as one who grew up watching stocking market daily 1 hour on CNBC Awaaz from age 12-17 but I am now going to put money myself(ideally 10k for trading for my initial journey)

Reply

Ishaan, thanks for the kind words, and happy to note you started early.

My advice – yes, it is overwhelming to learn everything in one go. So take things one step at a line. Break down the learning into shorter term goals and objectives. This seems to have helped many to progress through.

Reply

- o Karthik Rangappa says:
August 18, 2025 at 10:18 am

Utkarsh, some of the best investors do tend to combine both TA and FA. FA for deep research on stocks to develop a conviction for making long term investments and TA for timing the exact entry and exit of the stock. So its good to know both 😊

Hi karthik sir,
Thanks for the reply...!

okay, then why Adani NET WORTH is dropped (as shown in news 1 lakh crore), as share price is corrected with current market pressure and reports from foreign agency, the reduction in share price is directly attributed to the loss of retail investor as we increased share price in trading due to expectations. how this action impact wealth of Adani?

Reply

- o Karthik Rangappa says:
February 8, 2023 at 9:33 am

Because the promoter's net worth and literally every investor's net worth are tied to the share price of Adani, right?

Hi karthik,

As u told in the previous modules, onpy face value money is counted as real company share and rest we pay will be sit in premium account.

So when buy an adani share now, aprt from face value my rest of money will sit in premium account of company.

Then if i am selling the share for less amount [say due to the current pressure on adani stocks], the other person is buying it for less price from me.

Here i am loosing my money[as a retail investor], how does this effect their balance sheets towards the huge loss.

- o Karthik Rangappa says:
February 7, 2023 at 9:25 am

That excess over the face value sits as the premium only at the time of IPO and not while trading. When you buy sell from market, you are trading against a counterparty just like you.

Sir,

I have recently started to do intraday.

Wish to constantly buy and sell just one particular company share.

For example once I bought and sold Reliance shares in ""MIS""

Made a profit of Rs 506.

About one percent of the Amount involved,viz Rs 50000.

Then for sometime the ril share went down again.

I thought of doing one more trade and bought similar RIL shares in ""MIS"".

But, now I could see that this fresh purchase got superimposed on earlier MIS trade ,which was highlighting the profit of Rs 506 in Green colour.

I got confused...but still managed...

RIL went up once again and I made a similar profit once again.

Sir,

What I don't understand is that my second time buying was a fresh MIS. Trade.

Why did it get superimposed on the earlier trade and cause confusion.

Is there a way out...???

We can manage a Trade better if we see it as a Distinct second trade...

I wish to do many such trade with SAME SHARE...

Please guide...how do I go about it...

Thanks

Also Request for an increase in NUMBER of shares in the WATCHLIST.

Initially there were only

20. X. 5. =. 100

Now

50. X. 5. =. 250.

Share mkt is growing...

Number of Good Shares are Growing....

Ipo are increasing....

Even UPSTOX has watchlist of 1500 shares.

Maybe

2000 is PERFECT for ZERODHA.

Hoping for the BEST...

Hello Karthik, thank you for the excellent help you have been providing. A basic question related to equity and its relationship to derivatives

My understanding is derivatives just follows the underlying equity and have no influence in terms of moving the price up/down. However the price movement in equities reflects on derivatives right?

if the above understanding is correct, may i know how people say short covering pushed the market up or vice versa? (i believe equity shorts are allowed only intraday)

Pls share some insight, thank you

Harsha

Reply

o Karthik Rangappa says:

First of all thanks a lot for putting out this brilliant piece of work.

A) This chapter mentions a module for “ financial modelling for investment practice”. Just wanted to know if this module is already published or if you can provide any time estimate by when will it be published?

B) Is there any module or chapter which can help me in modelling my portfolio? If not, can you suggest any books I can read for the same.

Hello

Even browsing on zerodha is feeling like confusion. I mean you have modules in varsity to read, then you have z- connect, then tradingqna and many more. I mean how can we take proper steps in learning . Means first read this and than other kind of approach. I am keen on developing my own startegies rather than depending on other. Now earlier you told to start with swing trading, but question is to with what startegy. How to decide entry and exit. Please guide.

Also, I have mailed some account opening queries to zerodha team. But still have not recived any answers. Email is madhu@zerodha.com

The best way is to pick up a module, learn what's being discussed there and implement what you've learnt in the market by deploying small bits of capital. This way you get to validate your learning.

Hello Karthik Sir

Firstly thanks to complete team for putting up such informative content. I am looking to open an demat+trading account with zerodha. Few queries I have are as follows:

1. Will I get a margin for trades in Cash if I dont have balance in my account and how much time I get to put in the money in account either by transferring funds or selling the stocks.
2. What are terms BO, MIS, CNC , AMO and all? Where can I get a detail knowledge for all this.
3. While placing any order, Can I place SL and target in same order? How does this operate here?

Also, once I learn technical analysis, what should my next step for trading for short term. How do I set up up my approach. Do I need to see various videos and strategies available on youtube. Do I need to learn quantitative analysis after technical?

I know there are lots of questions, but I know this will be answered here and hence posted to clear my kmind.

Reply

- o  Karthik Rangappa says:
May 10, 2020 at 8:32 pm

- 1) You need to have cash in your account, margin provided is dependent on how much cash you have
- 2) Check this – <https://zerodha.com/policies-and-procedures#tab-equities>
- 3) Yes, you can, check this – <https://zerodha.com/z-connect/tradezerodha/kite/introducing-gtt-good-till-triggered-orders>

You can start with sing trading wherein you buy stocks and hold them for few days/weeks and at the same time read more about futures and options.

What I wanted to know is that I know people who trade only on the basis of trend lines, indicators and basic technical strategies and are making good profit from the market on intraday basis,they don't even know what options are in depth as you have explained.

What advantage does a trader has, who has given a lot of time learning and hardwork practicing and memorising theory behind everything that are mentioned in the content over the prior traders?

Yes, otherwise you will have to give delivery of shares. Hence to avoid this, you close the position the same day.

Hi!! Thank you. Must say an excellent article for beginners. So Karthik I don't understand the last part of this module.

1) What is an MACD indicator?

2) What is PE ratio? And third standard derivation?

Reply

- o Karthik Rangappa says:
April 3, 2018 at 10:49 am

The terms are explained in their respective modules (MACD in Technical Analysis and PE in Fundamental Analysis, and Standard Dev in options and trading systems). I used these terms here to give a sense of what to expect.

151.  srisri says:
February 18, 2018 at 8:39 pm

QA based POV – With the recent up move, the stock's price to earnings (PE) touched the 3rd standard deviation. There is only 1% chance for the PE to breach the 3rd standard deviation. Hence it is prudent to expect a reversion to mean; therefore the stock is a sell.

can you please elaborate the above? It's a tad bit confusing.

What are the different basis for trading? I know trading based on Fundamental, Technical and Quantitative approach. What others forms of trading is there?

Reply

o Sundeep says:

February 10, 2018 at 3:14 pm

Sir to be clear, I'm asking about the basis on which trades can be taken, like based on market profile or technical Analysis.. And not the time frames. It'd be greatly helpful if you can guide me on this. BTW, enjoying varsity very much.. Have recommended it to all my friends and colleagues as well. Thanks in advance.

Reply

■ Karthik Rangappa says:

February 10, 2018 at 7:11 pm

Thanks for spreading the word about Varsity, Sundeep.

Selecting the time frame is secondary. If you opt for TA, then something like candlesticks will help. For investing, nothing beats Fundamentals...and for short-term trading, you can consider something like pair trading (based on stats/quants).

Reply

- o  Karthik Rangappa says:
February 10, 2018 at 6:45 pm

These are the three main categories, Sundeep.

Reply

-  Sundeep says:
February 10, 2018 at 7:40 pm

Sir what are some lesser known methods/basis for placing a trade apart from those three? That's what I wanted to know. Thanks for the amazing write ups sir.

Reply

-  Karthik Rangappa says:
February 11, 2018 at 9:23 am

Every other technique is a derivative of these three broader techniques. Of course, you can always rely on your gut. This is outside the purview of the TA, FA, and QA. A lot of traders use this occasionally, including me 😊

Reply

-  Sundeep says:
February 11, 2018 at 10:23 am

Sir I have few more doubts. How would you classify placing trades based on market behavior? Like volatility is high on stocks surrounding news. So short the same. What kind of trade is that?

-  Karthik Rangappa says:
February 12, 2018 at 10:55 am

Since its a bet on Vol, I'd peg it to QA. In fact, you can use ATR indicator to get a sense of Vol, that would be TA.

154.  Pradeep says:
February 8, 2018 at 4:27 pm

Sir you have said that scalping is essentially buying and selling of stocks in large quantities, for a small price difference. Now, what is large quantity? Would a number like 25000 qty of a particular stock be enough for scalping?

Reply

- o Karthik Rangappa says:
January 18, 2018 at 11:31 am

This again depends on the stock price. If the price says 10, then 25K is not much. So instead of thinking in terms of quantity, it makes sense to think in terms of the value of transaction.

Reply

161. Hemprasanth says:

What is face value of a stock? What's the difference between this and stock price?

Reply

- o Karthik Rangappa says:

Face value is the nominal value of the share at the time of creation of the share. The stock price is the price determined by the market participants.

Reply

- Hemprasanth says:
February 7, 2018 at 4:20 pm

I have following queries with respect to share market .
can you please help me to understand this.

- 1) Does company growth totally depends on share market value.
For example : An I.T company share market prices are getting down by 50% (from 500 per share to 250 per share) but company running with all existing clients so does this prices down will start layoff in company or what does impact of low share prices for any individual company.
- 2) Personally , i want to retain share for longer period then want to sell it out so is there any different category for this .As i knew that in intra-day share will be buy/sell on the same day.
- 3) what is an ideal way to open trade/demat account . With broker or direct with bank.
For example : should i go with sharekhan/zerodha or icici direct . which to select and why?

Reply

- o  Karthik Rangappa says:
August 18, 2017 at 11:13 am

- 1) No, the growth depends on the core operations of the business. The share price is a reflection of the growth in operations. If operations and business grows, so will its share price
- 2) Yes, you can invest for long term. I personally know people who continue to hold Infy shares from the time of its IPO
- 3) You can choose to open it with a broker like us :). We are India\'s leading stock broker. If you have an AADHAAR number, then you can even open the account online within few minutes, click here – <https://zerodha.com/?ref=varsity>

The benefits are reaped when the raise funds via IPO. Of course, the network of the promoters is also dependent on the share price.

Yesterday I purchase 1000 shares of SBI @ RS 300 [say] at Intraday Trading Zerodha Platform, after some moment it hit a Stop Loss and I lost Rs 2000/- on the trade.

In this case how much would be debited from my Zerodha Equity Balance.

I think RS 4000/- was debited from my account.

Kindly explain such scenario , I am new to trading....

We do not have anything on MF yet, however, we will create a module on MFs soon. Ideally, you should not have lost that money. Is this the fund you've invested in? –

It was Peerless Liquid Fund – Dividend-Monthly
<https://coin.zerodha.com/funds/14055555.002182>. The NAV when I invested in Oct 2016 was 1005.9436 while the NAV when redeeming in July 2017 was 1003.3102. The units remained the same. It was a monthly dividend, but I don't know what happened to the dividends. Agree, ideally, I shouldn't have lost money (even though it may have not appreciated much) given that it was a liquid MF, but not sure what happened here. I had invested 7L in Taurus liquid MF through another broker and there too I lost close to 22K. 😞 futures contract for wipro now (24/06) future price 258 lot 2400 expiry on 29/2016. for the same buy margin 205488 sell margin 76968 why that much difference (128520)??

2) i observed some times futures price is trading at lower than spot.
i learned futures mimics spot. futures acts according to underlying asset please clarify me sir

Reply

o Karthik Rangappa says:

June 25, 2017 at 9:15 am

1) Futures margin is the same for both buy and sell, they cant differ. Are you sure you are looking at the right contract/right number of lots etc? Please do recheck once.

2) Yes, there are at times when futures trades below spot (referred to as discount) and at times, futures trades above spot (referred to as premium). This happens due to the natural demand and supply situation in the market. However, the overall price movement in Futures is based on the spot prices.

2. Also wanted to know if there is a site where i can find time of declaration of corporate earnings as in trading economics, as most of the websites i have found only have dates but do not mention time. And at trading economics, i was unable to find Indian corporate.
3. And lastly, as Indian Citizens are we allowed to trade in global markets such as US. Is there a similar concept as FDI for US markets. Also would like to know your opinion for trading in US markets. My reason for trading in US market would be to take advantage of dollar conversion rate, ie if i manage to make profits in dollars, i can be at an advantage as i would still be spending in INR only.

Excellent Work Karthik !! Much Appreciated !! Request you to advice regarding quantitative analysis. If i wish to trade as a swing trader, would the volatility distribution explained in "Options" module be sufficient for me to get a POV (as far as QA is considered, in addition to POV from TA and FA). If not, request to add that module. Also i understand, getting a POV by making use of your technical analysis module, i may trade at 3:20pm (same day) or 9:15am(next day) by considering 3-6 months candles. But what do you recommend be the number of historical candles if i wish to trade during the day. And is the pivot provided by zerodha kite, obtained on the same lines as that explained in the "Support and Resistance" chapter of TA module. Lastly does zerodha provide quantitative charts (Volatility distribution chart as explained in Options Module) in any of the platforms, if not do you suggest any forums or platforms for obtaining the same. Alternatively i can also use the spreadsheet provided in the "Volume Distribution" module, but request you to suggest the history data for the stock i need to consider if i wish to be a swing trader.

Thanks Kiran.

1) Yes, it certainly does.

2) It really depends on your outlook. For example, I mostly look at EOD charts for intraday for at least 3 months. Some people only look at last 3 days data...and some look at last 15 mins data. So there is no right or wrong answer here.

3) Pivot works on a preset calculator, this is different from what we have discussed in S&R chapter

4) No, not as of now

5) Will try and do that

Hi Karthik,
i recently opened an account with zerodha , i have a query ,when i tried to place an order there is an option like VALIDITY: DAY OR IOC what is the meaning of this?
2nd doubt if i enter a scrip name in wishlist like reliance it is showing RELIANCE-BE, RELIANCE-BL what does that mean.
Thanks&Regards

Reply

◦  Karthik Rangappa says:
January 11, 2017 at 10:52 am

A day order is valid until it gets executed or till the end of day (market close). For example, if your order is to buy Reliance at 985, then the order stays in the system till Reliance hits 985. Immediate or Cancel (IOC) on the other hand checks for the price, if it is 985, the order gets executed, else gets cancelled.

BE, BL, EQ etc are all different market segments. You can know more about it here – https://www.nseindia.com/products/content/equities/equities/mrkt_segment.htm

If you are just starting, I'd suggest you stick to EQ.

In Chapter 6 you have mentioned: Day Trader – A day trader initiates and closes the position during the day. He does not carry forward his positions. He is risk averse and does not like taking overnight risk. For example – He would buy 100 shares of TCS at 2212 at 9:15AM and sell it at 2220 at 3:20 PM making a profit of Rs.800/- in this trade. A day trader usually trades 5 to 6 stocks per day. and in Chapter 10 you have mentioned: All equity/stock settlements in India happen on a T+2 basis. My question is: If i am a day trader then how can i buy and sell the same stock on the same day when all equity/stock settlements in India happen on a T+2 basis.

Reply

- o  Karthik Rangappa says:
November 4, 2016 at 11:28 am

Well, when you trade intraday, you close all the positions by close. Therefore you are fair and square. However, if you want to purchase a stock for delivery, then you will have to buy...and the settlement happens on a T+2 basis. By settlement i mean, the act of the stock hitting your DEMAT account.

November 14, 2016 at 6:46 pm

You buy TCS at 9:30 AM and sell it anytime before 3:20 PM (using product code MIS, Bo Or CO) then its considered an intraday trade. However, if you buy TCS with CNC as your product type, then you are essentially buying the stock to hold for few days. Settlement in such case happens on a T+2 basis.

If the stock is de listed then you cannot trade it. In fact, if a stock that you hold is about to get de listed, then it usually gets delisted at a very high premium to its current price, which is really good for the investors.

\' The total of 50 lakh shares is called the Authorized shares of the company. These shares have to be allotted amongst the promoter and two angels plus the company has to retain some amount of shares with itself to be issued in the future\'

As per initial share holding pattern, promoters and angel investors control 25 lakhs shares,

My question is \'who provided other 25 lakhs ruppees and who controls/owns 25 LKHS shares in company\'s account\'. Based on the seed funding by promoter(20 LKHS) and angel investors (2* 2.5 LKHS), shares are allocated. How shares are allocated under company\'s account ?

I'm assuming you are trading with Zerodha – so if you do intraday the order type is either NRML, MIS, or BO/CO....so this order type ensures that the trade is intraday and hence does not interfere with your holding. For you to square off from holdings the order type to use is CNC.

Sir,, if a company comes for public issue with floor price and price band of 500 -520, and if lead manager decides the issue price as 510,, then at what price it will be first listed in stock exchange?

Reply

- o  Karthik Rangappa says:

Listing will be at 510....and based on the demand supply the stock can open much higher or lower on the listing day.

Sir, please explain what is de-listing and its impact on share holders?

Reply

- o  Karthik Rangappa says:
July 29, 2015 at 5:55 am

De-listing happens when a listed company wants to pull off their shares from the public market. Usually when a company delists shareholders will get a better price. For example company ABC is trading at 100 on NSE, the company decides to delist, then the company is expected to delist at a premium ...so maybe they can offer 130 or 140.

B1, B2, H1 etc are all different series in the markets. For normal equity please select \"EQ\" series. Sometimes the scrip that you want if not in EQ will be available in B1 series. If the scrip is in B1, you cannot do intraday trade on it. To add stocks to your marketwatch, please use the drop down menu. If you are trading with Zerodha, then please do contact +91 80 40402020 for more details. Unfortunately we do not conduct training sessions in a physical set up.

Dear Sir, First of all, thank you very much for the wonderful efforts for training beginners like me. I have one question on the bid and offer part. If I want to purchase 3000 shares from the market and I raise a limit order. My price was 300 on the order. The quotes are showing 1 stock at 300 and another ones are 301,303,306,305 respectively. what does that mean? out of my 3000 requirement, I get only one share? or I have to raise a market order? kindly advise

Reply

◦  Karthik Rangappa says:

May 26, 2015 at 4:41 am

In this case you will get only 1 stock @ 300 and the balance 2999 will be pending order. Remember this is a limit order, hence you will get a fill only when the price meets your specification.

Actually This question has already been answered before. Here is it:
Well, this depends on the liquidity of the company. For a really large company like infy there is always someone buying and selling its shares...however there are some really small obscure companies in which trading does not happen...even if it does the volumes are low. So you need to make sure there is ample liquidity before you take positions.

Suppose I don't have cash in my Zerodha account, then I buy some shares with value X in the morning using leverage. The share price goes high in afternoon. And now the value is X+Y. And I sell them earning the profit of Y. Then how much interest I have to pay? If I sell them BTST then how much interest? I how much time span I should pay out leverage to Zerodha?

Reply

- o  Karthik Rangappa says:

What is averaging?

Reply

o Karthik Rangappa says:

January 31, 2015 at 7:17 am

Averaging is a term used when you buy shares in order to vary the cost of transaction. For example – Initially I buy 100 shares at Rs.20, cost of buying is Rs.2000. Next the price comes down to Rs.15, I buy another 100 shares this time the total cost of buying is Rs.1500/- and the overall cost is Rs.2000 + Rs.1500 = Rs.3500. Divide this by total 200 shares, the average cost of buying works out to $3500/200 = Rs.17.5$. Therefore initially I bought at Rs.20, now I averaged it at Rs.17.5. This is called averaging.

Hi Hari,

In simple terms, like any traditional business that involves buying and selling trading is not any different. By liquidity we mean that the shares that you purchase should be easily sell-able. In other words if you purchase a stock that nobody wants then you will not be able to sell it.

Before you purchase any stock check the volume of the stock that is being traded. This is a great indicator that tells you that so many people are buying and selling. More the volume the better. More volume involves more trades and more buyers and sellers which improves your chance of selling your stocks
