1. The Need to Invest

Chapters Next →

1.1 – Why should I invest?

Before we address the above question, let us understand what would happen if one chooses not to invest. Assume you earn Rs.50,000/- per month, and you spend Rs.30,000/-towards your day-to-day living; this can include expenses like housing, food, transport, shopping, medical, etc. The balance of Rs.20,000/- is your monthly surplus.

For the sake of simplicity, let us ignore the tax effect in this discussion.

To drive the point across, let us make a few simple assumptions –

1. The employer is kind enough to give you a 10% salary hike every year.
2. The cost of living is likely to go up by 8% yearly.
3. You are 30 years old and plan to retire at 50, this translates to 20 working years.
4. You don't intend to work after you retire.
5. Your expenses are fixed, and you don't foresee any other expenses.
6. The balance cash of Rs.20,000/- per month is retained as hard cash.

Going by these assumptions, here is what the cash balance will look like in 20 years.

Years Yearly Income Yearly Expense Cash Retained

1	600,000	360,000	240,000
2	6,60,000	3,88,800	2,71,200
3	7,26,000	4,19,904	3,06,096
4	7,98,600	4,53,496	3,45,104
5	8,78,460	4,89,776	3,88,684
6	9,66,306	5,28,958	4,37,348
7	10,62,937	5,71,275	4,91,662
8	11,69,230	6,16,977	5,52,254
9	12,86,153	6,66,335	6,19,818
10	14,14,769	7,19,642	6,95,127
11	15,56,245	7,77,213	7,79,032
12	17,11,870	8,39,390	8,72,480
13	18,83,057	9,06,541	9,76,516
14	20,71,363	9,79,065	10,92,298
15	22,78,499	10,57,390	12,21,109
16	25,06,349	11,41,981	13,64,368
17	27,56,984	12,33,339	15,23,644
18	30,32,682	13,32,006	17,00,676
19	33,35,950	14,38,567	18,97,383
20	36,69,545	15,53,652	21,15,893

Total Income 17,890,693

If one were to analyze these numbers, one would soon realize this is a scary situation. A few things are quite obvious –

1. After 20 years of hard work, you have accumulated Rs.1.7Cr.
2. Since your expenses are fixed, your lifestyle has not changed over the years, and you probably even suppressed your lifelong aspirations – a better home, car, vacations, etc.
3. After you retire, assuming the expenses will continue to grow at 8%, the retirement corpus of Rs.1.7Cr is good enough to sail you through roughly 8 years of post-retirement life. 8th year onwards, you will be in a tight spot with literally no savings left to back you up.

What would you do after you run out of money in 8 years? How do you fund your life? Is there a way to ensure that you collect a more considerable sum at the end of 20 years?

At this point, you may think that the assumptions are simple and that real life does not work like this. I agree, and I won't dispute that fact. However, the point to note in the above calculation is that no investments are made, hence the cash retained has a flat or zero growth.

Let's consider another scenario where instead of keeping the cash idle, you choose to invest the cash in an investment option that grows at, let's say, 12% per annum. For example – in the first year, you retained Rs.240,000/- which, when invested at 12% per annum for 20 years (19 years assuming you invest at the end of 1st year), yields Rs.2,067,063/- at the end of the 20th year. For those interested in math, here is how that works –

$$= 240000 * (1 + 12\%)^{(19)}$$

$$= \mathbf{2067063}$$

Dont worry about the math at this point. We will explain that later in this module (and several other modules in Varsity). Here is how the table looks if you choose to invest.

Years Yearly Income Yearly Expense Cash Retained Retained Cash Invested @12%

1	600,000	360,000	240,000	20,67,063
2	6,60,000	3,88,800	2,71,200	20,85,519

Total cash after 20 years

4,26,95,771

Your cash balance has increased significantly with the decision to invest surplus cash. The cash balance has grown to Rs.4.26Cr from Rs.1.7Cr, a staggering 2.4x more than earlier (when you choose not to invest). Clearly, with the decision to invest, you are in a much better situation to deal with your post-retirement life.

Now, going back to the initial question of why invest? There are a few compelling reasons –

1. Fight Inflation – By investing, one can deal better with the inevitable reality of life – the growing cost of living – generally referred to as Inflation.
2. Create Wealth – By investing, one can build a bigger corpus by the end of the target period. In the above example, the period was up to retirement, but it can be anything – children's education, marriage, house purchase, retirement holidays, etc
3. Better life – To meet life's financial aspirations.

1.2 – Where to invest?

Having figured out the reasons to invest, the next obvious question is – where would one invest, and what return can one expect with investing? When investing, one has to choose an asset class that suits the individual's risk and returns profile. For example, one individual will be open to taking a lot of risk with his or her money, while another may want to take moderate risk, while another would want zero risk.

Think of an asset class as an investment vehicle defined by its risk and return characteristics. The following are some of the popular asset classes.

1. Fixed income instruments
2. Equity
3. Real estate
4. Commodities (precious metals)

Fixed Income Instruments

Fixed-income instruments are investment avenues where your principal amount (the money you invest) is perceived to be safe. The entity pays an interest amount on the principal you invest. The bank's fixed deposit scheme is the simplest example of a fixed investment instrument. The interest paid could be quarterly, semi-annual or annual. The capital is returned to the investor at the end of the investment period, also known as the maturity period.

A few examples for fixed-income instruments are –

1. Bank's Fixed deposits
2. Bonds issued by the Government of India (also called G Sec bonds and T Bills)
3. Bonds issued by Government related agencies such as GAIL, HUDCO, NHAI, etc
4. Bonds issued by corporate's (Tata, Bajaj, Reliance, Adani)

As of October 2022, the typical return from a fixed-income instrument (bank's FD) varies between 5 – 6%. Government bonds offer about 5.5%, and a few corporate bonds offer nearly 9 or 10%. The rates across different instruments vary because of the risk varies. The Govt bonds are considered the safest investment, with zero risk to your investment, because, well, the govt can't cheat and run away with your money. Corporate bonds are risky, though; investment in corporate bonds can go to zero, and we have seen plenty of such examples in the past.

Equity

Investment in Equities involves buying shares of publicly listed companies. The shares are traded on the Bombay Stock Exchange (BSE) and the National Stock Exchange (NSE).

When an investor invests in equity, unlike a fixed-income instrument, there is no capital guarantee. However, as a trade-off, the returns from equity investment can be much better. Indian Equities have generated upwards of 12% CAGR (compound annual growth rate) over the past 10 to 15 years.

Investing in some of the best and most well-run Indian companies has yielded over 20% CAGR in the long term. Identifying such investment opportunities requires skill, hard work, and patience.

Real Estate

Real Estate Investment involves transacting (buying and selling) commercial and non-commercial land. Typical examples include transacting in vacant plots, apartments, and commercial buildings. There are two income sources from real estate investments: Rental income and Capital appreciation of the investment amount. The rental yield typically varies between 2-3%, which is not so attractive, in my opinion. The appreciation in land prices is in select pockets and is not uniform.

The transaction procedure can be quite complex involving legal verification of documents. The cash outlay in real estate investment is usually quite large. There is no official metric to measure the returns generated by real estate. Hence it would be hard to comment on this.

Commodity – Bullion

Gold and silver are considered one of the most popular investment options. Gold and silver, over the long term, have appreciated. Investments in these metals have yielded a CAGR return of approximately 5-8% over the last 20 years. There are several ways to invest in gold and silver. One can invest in jewelry, Exchange Traded Funds (ETF), or Sovereign Gold bonds, popularly called as SGBs.

Going back to our initial example of investing the surplus cash, it would be interesting to see how much one would have saved by the end of 20 years, considering he can invest in any one – fixed income, equity, or bullion.

1. By investing in fixed income at an average rate of 9% per annum (good corporate bond), the corpus would have grown to Rs.3.3Cr.
2. Investing in equities at an average rate of 15% per annum, the corpus would have grown to Rs.5.4Cr.
3. Investing in bullion at an average rate of 8% per annum, the corpus would have grown to Rs.3.09Cr.

Equities tend to give you the best returns, especially when you have a multi-year investment perspective.

Many of you reading this may wonder why I've not considered Cryptocurrencies as an asset class. When you invest your hard-earned money, you need to ensure enough checks, balances, and regulatory frameworks to protect you as an investor. Crypto, lacks all these; hence I'd suggest you stay away from crypto (or any other fancy investment option) till there is a regulatory framework.

It is best if your investments have a mix of all asset classes. It is wise to diversify your investment among the various asset classes. The technique of allocating money across asset classes is termed 'Asset Allocation', and we will discuss asset allocation later in Varsity.

For instance, a young professional may take a higher risk given the age and years of investment available. Typically investors should allocate at least 60% of their investable amount in equity, 20% in precious metals, and 20% in fixed-income investments. The percentage mix changes based on risk profile and age. For example, a retired person could invest 80% in fixed income (Govt bonds maybe), 10% in equity markets, and 10% in precious metals.

1.3 – Things to note before investing

Investing is an integral part of financial planning, but before you start your investment journey, it is good to be aware of the following –

1. Risk and Return go hand in hand. Higher the risk, the higher the return. The lower the risk, the lower the return.
2. Investment in fixed income is a good option if you want to protect your principal amount. It is relatively less risky. However, you have the risk of losing money when you adjust the inflation return. Example – A fixed deposit that gives you 9% when the inflation is 10% means you lose a net of 1% per annum. Alternatively, the risk increases if you invest in a corporate fixed-income instrument.
3. Investment in Equities is a great option. It is known to beat inflation over a long period. Historically equity investment has generated returns close to 14-15%. However, equity investments can be risky.
4. Real Estate investment requires a significant outlay of cash and cannot be done with smaller amounts. Liquidity is another issue with real estate investment – you cannot buy or sell whenever you want.
5. Gold and silver are relatively safer, but the historical return on such investment has not been very encouraging.

You can download the excel sheet used in the chapter to generate the two tables.

Key takeaways from this chapter

1. One has to invest, to secure his or her's financial future.
2. The corpus you build at the end of the investment period is sensitive to the return percentage. A slight variation in the rate can significantly impact the corpus.
3. Choose an instrument that best suits your risk and return appetite.

4. Equity should be a part of your investment if you want to beat inflation in the long run.
5. A good investment practice is to build a portfolio that mixes all asset classes.

Hey, I'm just starting out with the stock market and I'm a complete beginner. I wanted your advice — should I first learn everything properly and then start paper trading, or is it better to learn and practice simultaneously, like studying a concept and then applying it through paper trading? What approach would you recommend for a beginner like me?

I;d suggest you learn a concept, in parallel try to apply in the market. For example, if you learnt about SL, try and apply that concept in real market. Even if you buy/sell 1 share, that is ok. You will get a better understanding of things.

Can someone explain to me how the money retained (INR 240,000) in Year 1 and invested @ 12% returns becomes 20,67,063 as shown in the last column of the Illustration, this is part of the "Why Should I Invest" section?

Reply○ Chaitanya says:February 20, 2026 at 8:48 pm

I was confused too when I checked this value and did not understand how they obtained it but once I understood that the value was compounding year by year, it became easy to understand.

Basically the right hand most column is displaying how after investing the retained amount, how it compounds each year, the math behind it is $FV = PV \times (1 + r)^n$

Where:

FV = Future Value (the number in the rightmost column)

PV = Present Value (the "Cash Retained" for that specific year)

r = Interest rate (12%, or 0.12)

n = The number of years that specific chunk of money stays invested.

So to apply this into the context, it will look like:

Year 1: You save ₹2,40,000 at the end of Year 1. Because there are 20 years total, this specific chunk of money will sit and compound for the remaining 19 years.

Calculation: $240000 \times (1 + 0.12)^{19} = 20,67,063$

Year 2: You get a raise and save ₹2,71,200 at the end of Year 2. This new chunk of money will sit and compound for the remaining 18 years.

Calculation: $271200 \times (1 + 0.12)^{18} = 20,85,519$

Year 3: You save ₹3,06,096. This chunk compounds for the remaining 17 years.

Calculation: $306096 \times (1 + 0.12)^{17} = 21,01,668$

...this pattern continues all the way down... Year 19: You save ₹18,97,383. This money only has 1 year left to compound before you hit your 20-year deadline.

Calculation: $1897383 \times (1 + 0.12)^1 = 21,25,069$

Year 20: You save ₹21,15,893 on the very last day of your 20-year timeline. It has 0 years to compound.

Calculation: $2115893 \times (1 + 0.12)^0 = 21,15,893$

In the end after adding all of these compounded values, you get the final cash balance of 4,26,95,771.

And as to why is it compounding, compounding is after all earning interest on your interest. Compounding only happens in this scenario because the money is parked, reinvested automatically, and left completely untouched for the long haul. Hope the calculation and this explanation helped you!

What method for return calculation is used here?

Say you start with 1L and do all the trading that you want. At the end of the year, your 1L becomes 1.2L, you know its 20% profit. From this remove taxes, whatever is left gives you your post tax returns. You can compare this to Nifty or any other benchmark you wish.

The currency format (comma placements) across the mentioned amounts in article and tables are not consistent.

1. Can these modules be updated to have a global module configurable feature/option where reader can choose between western (1,000,000/100M) or Indian (10,00,000/10L) so that all places where currency is mentioned is consistent and is a configuration reader can set/choose and is up to the reader's comfortability?

2. Can the currency itself be configurable? USD and IND for now? In that case, may be above formats can be auto-implied like if USD is selected, comma formatting would be western, otherwise, if IND, comma formatting can be Indian?

First of all, I want to say big thanks to the Zerodha team for providing valuable financial knowledge for Free. I have an active Demat account in Zerodha. Client id- SYC556.

I have few questions about the table given which i didn't understand.

Firstly- the first table I understand completely.

Secondly -Pls clarify this, It is written that he invested for 19 years excluding the first year And the amount gained at the end of the 20th year was RS 20,67,063, Are you talking about the interest gain from the investment?

and then the interest accumulated is then again invested at 12% for 20 years?

are you taking about 40 yrs of investment in total in the given example?

Please try to clear my this confusion?

and as both the reader and customer of zerodha my suggestions will be to add one more column in the second table or another table in order to clarify this doubt. I think that many people are facing this doubt.

Thanking you,

I am unable to understand the column \"Retained Cash Invested @12%.\" Even though you tried to explain it in the previous comment but it doesn't make sense to me.

If the Cash retained in the first year was Rs. 2,40,000, then how come the Retained Cash Invested @ 12% increased to 20 lakh (20,67,063)? It should be Rs. 2,68,800, right?

Hey Riya, thats funny 😊 Wishing you the best, hope you have a great journey ahead 😊

So in stock markets, you can easily buy and sell stocks at the the click of button, does not matter what is the value of your transaction. But thats not possible with real estate. Its not easy to buy and sell realestate, hence its considered not so liquid.

I am invested in ICICI nifty 100 low volatility 30 index ETF passively via monthly SIP. Till now I have accumulated 4200 units and my concern is will I get enough liquidity in future when I will be selling ?

Sir suppose I will have 30000 units in future and currently volume is around on avg 3 to 4 lakhs per trading session...currently bid ask spread is narrow(difference of 2 to 3 paisa between bid ask) but sir my doubt is kya mujhe concerned hona chahiye liquidity ko le kr when I will be selling sometime in future ?

Greetings, Kartik.
I found the content to be really valuable due to its clear and accessible explanations for anyone without specialised knowledge. As a finance professor, I believe that this platform provides an excellent opportunity for my students to grasp the fundamental principles of investment. I would like to suggest an addition: by providing a 'next' plugin, readers will be able to seamlessly continue reading without having to leave the page and manually open the next PDF document. With over 15 years of expertise, I am aware that pupils have a limited attention span and may not read with great proficiency.

But why do only some stocks have FII/DII invested data others dont have any but still moving great??? If they have invested their investment should come under this category and in screener we can see this clearly...But in most stocks there is no fii/dii data, how instutions avoid being caught in that data??? weather they will do something like intraday trading in normal stocks or do they have any limits to get listed as fii/dii invesments which they cleverly avoiding???

Is the index is the one that shows whats the \"collective force or opinion of people\" to us...If not then whats the better way to understand the Opinion of People at the point of my Entry???

My Previous Question and Your Response for Reference::

Sir, i had a big confusion...its well known that stocks listed in nifty moves that index based on the weightage...But for me it looks like stocks move up and down based on nifty movements...Its because all the stocks tend to fall on the same day...take today for example soo many stocks fell along with nifty...How is that all stocks that dont have any links fell on same day, how should we understand this phenomenon...if this is market sentiment then how come everybody have the sentiment to sell totally unrelated stocks on same day or is there some instutions trigger this sentiments??? i belive understanding this part get me to next level so please help me sir...Thanks in Advance

Response::

That is makret, Siva. Different people have different opinions, and therefore tend to trade at different price levels. As a collective force, the market falls or increases.

Reply

o  Karthik Rangappa says:
September 14, 2023 at 6:54 am

Yes, it is important to check the overall index to get a sense of where the market is heading. It can so happen that the stock you are interested may look like its going up, but the index itself is not exhibiting strength, in such cases things can get a bit tricky.

This downward scroll-based learning does not do anything for me. Have you considered a module with a Next button, lesser text, and more engaging content? Articulate Storyline presentation with interactive buttons, tabs, the works? Like an elearning module? You could use an overarching scenario to drive home the message as well.

If you have considered all of this and do not prefer it, please ignore this message.

Hi Karthik Sir,

I am stuck in doubt and finally seeking your help. The problem is let\'s say I invest 5000 monthly for a period of 20 years at 12% per annum what would be my final return?

If possible, please do the year-wise calculation in google sheets and share the link. It\'s a humble request sir.

Reply

o  Karthik Rangappa says:
July 18, 2023 at 8:55 am

The final return depends on the market, but you can assume different market returns, like 10% or 12%, and see how the final amount varies. You can use any simple SIP calculators available online to figure this out.

In the table that demonstrates the growth of money @ 12% pa return, in year 1, if Rs. 240000 was invested, assuming it is 12% compounded annually for 20 years, i.e. , $240000 (1 + 12/100)^{20}$, it should yield Rs. 2,315,110.34 after 20 yrs. May I know why Rs. 20,67,063 is the amount that is generated after 20 yrs as per the table for Year 1. Similarly , for each year as well in the table...

Thank you,

Content is good but having trouble understanding the second graph,
6,00,000 earned 3,60,000 in expenses
2,40,000 retained. Right
And if I invest 2,40,000 at 12% return,
I should be making around 28,800 in interest.
Which gives 2,68,800.
But in graph it says making 20,67,063 rs.
I don't see how got that number from.

Downloaded the pdf of module 1.
Noticed it is not updated revised/updated.
For instance the following taxation update is missing from Chapter one in download pdf.
“Taxation on Equity investments held for more than 365 days is taxed at 10%, if the gains are more than Rs 1 lakh starting from 1st April 2018(previously such investments were tax-free). This is comparatively a lower rate of tax than the other asset classes.”
Appreciate your efforts in disseminating financial knowledge.

Investment in fixed income is a good option if you want to protect your principal amount. It is relatively less risky. However, you have the risk of losing money when you adjust the inflation return. Example – A fixed deposit which gives you 9% when the inflation is 10% means you are losing a net 1% per annum. Fixed-income investment is best suited for ultra risk-averse investors.

Can you tell me a bit more simplified Sir?

Reply

- o  Karthik Rangappa says:
December 3, 2021 at 12:45 pm

Meaning, on one hand, you are earning 9% and on the other hand, losing 10%, hence loss is 1%.

Hi Karthik,

I have a feature request for you today. I hope one day, you decide to write a module on international investing (esp the US). It would be great to have a list of differences between Indian and US markets like Demat accounts, clearing services, international mutual funds in India vs QQQ ETF, leveraged ETFs and so on.

It would clear the confusion for a lot of us who invest in both markets but don't have a good understanding of the basic concepts in the US market.

I have accounts with TD Ameritrade and Webull where I invest using ETF or direct stocks. But I feel I lack the underlying knowledge of how US market operates.

Thank you for the great work so far.

Hi Karthik,
Long time back you had mentioned that for the 12% CAGR table the calculation assumes that the money is accumulated at the end of every year and gets invested over the 20 year period. Hence for the first year the accumulated money gets invested for 19 years, not 20. Likewise for the 2nd year it gets invested for 18 years. So on and so forth. I guess this is where the difference is coming about. Of course, I have not conveyed this point across in the discussion above, will make the necessary edits. This edit has still not been made, it will be great for people who begin their journey with Varsity. Else they might get confused later on. I was very confused myself but then came across your comment.

The entity (potential investor) is initially addressed as \"one\" in the article. But, as we proceed the entity is addressed as \"he\" (gendered – male). Like in : \"much one would have saved by the end of 20 years considering he can invest in any one\".

I guess the gendered references can be switched to gender neutral words to make the language more inclusive.

Equity has maximum risk, which you can take when you are working because you have age by your side, so you have more time to earn. But when you retire, there is no scope to earn, hence you need to take lesser risk. Debt is considered less risky.

I'm here after Nitin Kamath's podcast on The Ranveer Show by BeerBiceps. This is just an appreciation for this educating initiative by Zerodha, that is still relevant in 2021. Man you guys are awesome and you might have gained another zerodha user in future, as I'm starting my journey as an investor/trader. FYI that mention of the podcast in the starting is just for my man Ranveer because he's just a hustler and a content creator who believes in helping people with their work just like you guys. For e.g I was going through the lesson of IPO markets, the lesson here (on Web) talks about a complete story of how a start-up raising a capital through different sources and going to an IPO, couldn't find the same on the App.

Others were of references of years (e.g 2014 here and 2018 in App) and stocks in the same lessons. So, just got curious about which one to be preferred.

Reply

o Karthik Rangappa says:
May 17, 2021 at 11:05 am

That IPO bit was causing a lot of confusion to readers (check the comments), hence we decided to not include in the app. Ref years should not really matter I suppose as the concepts will continue to remain the same.

I tried the following to understand the numbers in \"Retained cash invested @12%\", but none are matching with what is published in the chapter.. Karthik or anybody, please help me in understanding the math behind this. Thanks in advance!

1. For year1 → (Cash retained in year1 X 0.12) + Cash retained in year1. For year2 → (Cash retained in year2 + total amount accrued in year1) X 0.12 + (Cash retained in year2 + total amount accrued in year1). I repeated the same until 20th year and arrived at 47819263

2. [This may not be meaningful, but I tried] For year1 → (cash retained in year1 X 0.12) + cash retained in year1. For year2→ (cash retained in year2 X 0.12) + cash retained in year2. I did the same for 20 years, at the end of 20th year I got 2315110.34

Reply

- o  Karthik Rangappa says:
May 9, 2021 at 8:09 pm

The assumption is that teh retained cash grows at 12% for 20 years (first row). So the formula is = Amount *(1+ interest)^(number of years).

Hello, I think some of the information in this article needs to be updated!

1. Rate of return for fixed income securities is taken from 2014! It is 2021 and it has dropped significantly!
2. In investment options, in Real Estate Section, I think REITs should be added, as now its been 2 years since introduction and 1 year since 1st actual REIT was listed on stock exchange!

I hope you find this comment and make necessary changes.

Reply

o  Karthik Rangappa says:

The idea is to give the readers conceptual knowledge. The rates keep varying year by year.

REIT is a slightly complicated topic, will include it in the 2nd part of the personal finance module.

I just want to learn some technical analysis to understand which companies to choose to invest in from a long term perspective. I generally rely on my friends for stock suggestions but some knowledge of my own would be really helpful. Please if you could guide where to learn, learning intraday trading would be an added advantage, I am ready to invest time and money on such learning.

Hi,

In the 2nd part where the person is investing at 12% pa. Why is it assumed that it is being invested at the year-end? Isn't the person losing the opportunity cost of 1% pm by not investing monthly?

I get that it ease the complication of the calculation, but can you tell me from the logical perspective

Is trading in Futures&Options and short selling allowed for everyone once we have an account for equity with Zerodha. Is there any verification required separately to leverage money from Zerodha if we short sell for multiple days (sell today and buy after some days)? Because short selling for multiple days means we have to lend the shares from someone and pay interest for the time we lend, right?

1. I said this one for ease of browsing. Instead of 'go to top', 'previous chapter' and 'next chapter' buttons would work great too.

Hello sir,

I'm a beginner in finance and I recently finished the first module. I'd like to let you guys know that what you've created is really a work of art. Everything is perfectly well explained for beginners. I've a few suggestions:

1. Just after a chapter ends and comments start a 'go to top' button would be cool.
2. If comments could be sorted in reddit fashion or maybe just a 'question answer filter' which would sort and put those comments which have 'question marks' in them at top, it'd be great. Sometimes I've some doubts left or maybe someone just asks a good follow up or maybe even off topic question and it's good to see them. But going through 100s of comment to find questions is tedious. I remember while writing this comment that can be done with in browser 'find in page' feature too but it'd still make a good FAQ section post chapters.

These are just some features that I felt missing but I still love varsity and find it perfect.

As far as we understand the leverage will be uniform across all brokers. So this will have an impact, at least in the initial few weeks. But I suspect the impact will alter the order book. Also, this is a fairly tricky call, I quite doubt if anyone can speak with certainty here.

Hey Karthik...unrelated question,

- massive respect fo you guys for building a reliable and sleek trading platform but...
- why so conservative in terms of leverage?
- know a few shady brokers who provide OTT leverage until...
- found even ICICI / Kotak give fair leverage (much more than zerodha) for some of their intraday products...so why not you guys?
- Have to switch to them for this sole reason

- tried asking on tradingqna but to no avail...
- genuinely clueless as to why Zerodha won't?

We are risk-averse and conservative as a broker, Manas. In fact, I think this is how a financial services firm catering to capital markets should be. Excess leverage can kill not just the broker but also the clients. The markets have taught this lesson one too many times.

Why can't we just change our savings currency to something like Qatari Rial or Swiss Franc, as both these currencies have inflation rate of -3.06% and -1.3%. And we can easily beat inflation, because if you will see what happened in Turkey or Argentina their currency suddenly loosed value due to high inflation and if the inflation crosses 20% then it gets extremely hard to make any profit.

I have selected the following ETF to buy (hold / delivery position) from zerodha platform. The investment amount is 1,00,000/- (one lakh in one go). Take below as an example. Amounts taken to nearest round value for easy understanding.

niftybees @ rs. 100 @ 200 qty = 20,000/-

setfnif50 @ rs. 100 @ 200 qty = 20,000/- setfnn50 @ rs. 250 @ 200 qty = 50,000/-

icicinity @ rs. 100 @ 100 qty = 10,000/-

The biggest query is that VOLUME & VOLATILITY. I heard that apart from NIFTYBEES, other ETF are not recommended by many analyst, youtube experts, as instantly 100 or 200 quantity buying/selling couldn't be possible in one go due to less interest / low demand / less traders on those. So it would not be possible to trade as short term and buy sell 100-200 quantities in one go. How far it is true / correct ?

(Note – I don't want to treat ETFs as SIP or mutual fund as I have some different outlook on it, and I already have diversified SIP portfolios. This ETF investment I only want to take tension free gain.

Once nifty become up, then take the profit by selling and buy on low again and go on, rather investing in stocks and watch, monitor)

So please advise, whether the above 4 ETF are ok to invest, or only at NIFTYBEES considering my above concept.

Hi Kartik, a quick question.

In the section where you're showing how savings are being compounded and accumulated, i applied the same situation and values in excel. While calculating the total idle savings it amounted to 1.8 Crores instead of 1.7 and Savings reinvested amounted to around 4.5 Crores instead of 4.2.

I crosschecked all the values and everything is correct but just that when i add up the savings column and the reinvested savings column, values are different (mentioned above)

Not a big thing but it would be great to get clarity on the same.

As you mentioned in this article directly investment in equity gives higher returns (14-15%) but amount of risk involved in that too much. I have studied that if we do some investment mutual fund through AMC it will also gives higher returns with less risk.

First, I thank you Karthik Rangappa & Zerodha for your initiative to spread financial literacy through zerodha varsity that too free of cost, each and every chapter in this varsity is very use full for a beginner. I have 4 years of experience in stock market having a little bit knowledge of stocks market. I basically belong to AP state in AP many people (beginners) are trying to invest in stock market but they don't know much about stock market and you don't believe you will find hardly 1 book in telugu about stock market written by Mr. Kiran Kumar long days back. After reading your Zerodha Varsity chapter and examples I'm impressed. I request your highness if you allow me to use your varsity material to translate the same to my local language "Telugu" and publish in my telugu blog. Not all the content only basic knowledge data of the stocks market. And I recommend to all my viewers those who are good in English to read all the chapters from your Zerodha Varsity. I will proudly say in my blog that the content is taken from Zerodha Varsity and translated to Telugu for your better understanding. Waiting for a positive reply.

Dear Zerodha,

Would it be an opportunity to make the money signs just in dollars $, because from International view it is ease to understand. It is just a suggestion and I think it is more clearly understandable to an international audience.

I do understand that from the perspective of Indian investors audience, is in Rs.

But in my opinion would be more clearly for an international audience if you could explain it from the dollar perspective.

Thank you again for the great platform that you made.

Best regards,

Hi

I have done my B.tech from Information Technology in 2015 and after that I was working in IT industry. From my matriculation itself I was highly passionate about stock market but because of lack of awareness about stock I continued my career as others were doing in surrounding, but now since I became aware about stock and I did trading as a client of Zerodha as well and I want to quit everything related to IT Industry and want to deep dive into stock market field only so how Zerodha can provide us opportunity to work with Zerodha.

As I have realized Stock market is a very challenging field so if someone tries to make this as a secondary field in his career share market can't return good to them. And Once I got into trading I don't find any work interesting other than trading so I can't think to continue the it job parallel.

I am ready to compromise with my salary also since I will be a newbie in investment field.

Only Studying Zerodha Varsity theoretically is not enough as i have realized,Environment where I want to listen see speak know do everything about markets only.

So can you please guide me how i should proceed with Zerodha for the growth of organization and personal as well.

Why can\'t zerodha make varsity available on amazon and flipkart in book format in color print version.

There is no enjoyment in studying around 1000(around 100 pages *10 modules) pages on computer or tablet screen,If i download in PDF format and get its hard copy in color print then for 1 module price will be 100 pages*10 rupees/page=1000 rupees which is too much expensive.

I started googling from what is share,what is stock etc,i watched many videos on YouTube to get the concept from beginning since i am a beginner ,i downloaded many books based on investment but none helped me really.I have wasted 1 year in doing so because none of the material was so systematic Finally I came to know about Zerodha Varsity and yes this is the material every beginners needs to get into stock market.

PPF –

Pros:

-fixed income say 8.x % (varies on govt announcements slightly)

-Income Tax Exempt, exempt, exempt

-Safety – Central Govt

-Loan is possible

Cons:

-Lock in 15 yrs(5 yrs if urgent)

SIP

REturns depends on which Scrip/Stock/company u select (thorough study and invest)

High risk /high Gain- possibilty of loosing more depends on Market /Economics of company and Macro

No fixed return

To safeguard the investor's money, do mutual funds in India hedge their portfolio against index derivatives? Are they allowed to do by the SEBI? If they do, then why is there a free fall of NAVs of all equity-based MFs?

Yes, MFs are allowed to hedge their portfolios. But please remember, hedging is an outcome of the market timing of the fund manager. In my opinion, this is the hardest thing to do.

Karthik/Nithin/Nikhil:

I am having to post here as I do not have a way to escalate Zerodha support.

My need is (at least it appears to be) very simple — I need to update my (KYC) contact details (email and phone) with Zerodha. I was forced to raise multiple tickets in the past couple of months because every time the ticket was claimed to have been resolved, I would receive an email or notification on my old contact details, which continues till date. The only response I get is that the details have been updated with Zerodha and sometimes receive a screenshot as proof of it.

However, the fact that I continue to receive notifications (from AMCs) on my older email and phone tells me that the KYC details were never updated by Zerodha despite paying the required fees for the update. The response I received today says the following: “If you want to change your registered phone number or email address with the AMC for Coin, you have to send a letter to the RTA or the AMC” and goes on to list the 4 RTAs — to which I would need to presumably send letters — and closes the email with a “If you need further help changing your registered email address, phone no. contact the respective RTA or AMC.”

Is this the de facto method to get this done?

The convenience of having all the investments in one place is moot, if the communication regarding each one is spreading across multiple contact channels, especially if the older contact channels are rendered inaccessible. It is hard for me to believe that Zerodha will not participate in helping rectify the situation. While I have been satisfied with the platform(s), this little thing is turning out to be a point of great frustration and Zerodha Support has thus far proved very ineffective at helping resolve the issue.

Would appreciate any help from you.

Thanks!

Hi,

Would like to know why standard 4% SB Account interest hasn't been applied to calculation of "Savings without investment". Also, what is the source of your assumption of 12% rate of return for amount that is invested. Is there a risk-free investment option that provides 12% rate of return?

Thanks!

Reply

- o  Karthik Rangappa says:
June 12, 2018 at 10:50 am

I think the 4% SB account return gets eaten away by the inflation. Moreso, a conservative approach is always better 😊
12% is the average market return of any decent MF over 5-10 years period.

Reply

-  Aditya says:
June 18, 2018 at 7:51 pm

Agreed, inflation eats up around 4%. But, wouldn't that also apply to the returns from stocks / MFs also? In which case, the real rate of return from stocks / MF's will be 8% and not 12%.

Reply

-  Karthik Rangappa says:
June 19, 2018 at 11:20 am

Yes, that's true. You can do the whole math with 8%, to give you an inflation adjusted view.

Team:I don't if this is the right place for this or not, but I have a feature request to make. So is there a way to place an order on an illiquid stock, and forget about it. The order gets cancelled at the end of the day. But, it would be great if the order persists. So that that stock is purchased as soon as it becomes available. That would be a useful addition to Kite.

Thanks!

Now in the discussion it is mentioned that the earnings will last for 8 years. Isn't the calculation wrong? If not please explain how answer is 8 years. I have calculated as following:

$1553652(1 + 8/100)^n$ raised to the power $n = 1.7$ cr approx

Hi Karthik,

Your tutorials have been best. Got to learn a lot from them (still learning). After getting to learn stock market with proper information and investing, I feel stock market is the safest investment contrary to the notion that we have in India. Due to the large scale misconception people distance themselves from stock market, specially the women , the housewives. Your tutorials can really be helpful to them.

I wish to teach my mom the basics of stock market. She does not understand much of English. It would be really great if sometime in near future your team at Zerodha can bring up this varsity chapters in Hindi. That will be very helpful for my mom and other Indians whose understanding in English is less compare to Hindi.

Will be always grateful to you for sharing your knowledge and experience in stock market.

Hello Sir,

Great insight. I have a small query, how did you calculate the retained earnings over there with 12%? I am not able to understand that part, so please could you explain it to me once more. Your guidance would be appreciable.

Thank you

Reply

- o  Karthik Rangappa says:
August 22, 2017 at 12:08 pm

I've just assumed that the savings is growing at a rate of 12%. This can be any growth rate actually. The growth rate formula assuming 12% growth and 100 as amount would be –

$$100 * (1 + 12\%)$$

Reply

-  Aditya says:
August 24, 2017 at 10:33 pm

Thank you for reply sir. I'm still not clear here, I mean if i take $240,00 * (1 + 12\%)$ or even $100 * (1 + 12\%)$, its still not correct the way you have got. So, please could you give me another 5 mins of your time and explain me this concept sir?

Thank you. I really appreciate it.

Reply

-  Karthik Rangappa says:
August 25, 2017 at 8:56 am

Sorry, I missed this –

Its 240,000 growing at 12% year on year for 20 years. So the formula would be –

$$240,000 * (1 + 12\%)^{20}$$

Check section 6.7 in this chapter – <https://zerodha.com/varsity/chapter/the-stock-markets/> to figure out how to calculate returns.

Hello sir,

Thank you for your guidance. I got the answer for the first year but then what about the rest calculation after that for the 2nd and 3rd year retained cash invested and so on because i tried to calculate again and again with different methods and formula i am not getting the same answers as above. Should i take $=271200*(1+12\%)^{18}$ or $=240000*(1+12\%)*18$. Please do let me know about your method here. Lastly, I did have a look at the link o provided me and I understood about the interest rate calculation over there so thank you about that as well.

Sincere apologies for your taking your time and bothering you again and again. I'm just keen to understand it perfectly thats all.

Thank you again

■ Karthik Rangappa says:

August 27, 2017 at 11:09 am

Yes, the amount increases year on year and the time reduces by 1 year. So, $271200*(1+12\%)^{19}$ seems correct.

Reply

o Karthik Rangappa says:

July 17, 2017 at 2:27 pm

You need a trading account to buy or sell shares whereas a demat account is required to store the shares bought. Demat account is like a bank account, instead of money, you save shares.

It really depends on how you trade. It can be a quite challenging if you are new to trading. Keep your exposure low, so that you risk lower amounts in your initial days. Increase the capital after you get more confident. Usually, it takes about 3-4 years and constant reading to gain some confidence in the market.

Good luck.

I mean to say, is it possible to start trading without covering everything here or one must to have all the knowledge before starting.....OR what are the main things one must know before opening account and start trading?

It is right that one must study these things and market for whole life to gain knowledge and to be good in trading and investing.

Actually I want to start immediately but I don't know I am eligible or not. I want to know the eligibility from the point of knowledge to start trading with Zerodha....

Hi Sir, I am doing Home based Medical Transcription job and maximum time I am sitting in front of my computer with good internet facility. So 2-3 months back I decided to do online share market trading (Actually it was my dream from 2-3 years back) to invest my extra money and earn more. So from that time I am studying about this from internet and I am doing some researches. Now I have decided to open an account with Zerodha. But before that I want to know some thing. Actually I have known very less in this field till now except some basic things. My question is: Is this necessary to be from Commerce background (in graduation as I am from Science) and is it necessary to have MBA for this because I did MCA (I am not telling about the qualification, I am telling about knowledge like about Economy or Economics, other business related terms and share market related terms and definition)???

Actually I am reading your VARSITY and getting knowledge, also studying through other websites and youtube. Is it okay to start trading like this??? I can continue my knowledge gathering simultaneously with trading.

I want to know am I eligible for this ? Can I start with small amount now? I want to know the eligibility for trading??? OR I have to know some other things before start trading with Zerodha....

Please reply me and HELP me out.....

Dear Nithin, I have 2 accounts with Zerodha and I congratulate the entire Z team for great service of high quality and sensitivity. I need to open an account/dmat in my daughter's maiden name because she has turned 18 and now carries a PAN card. I have the following Q (a) Post her marriage and subsequent to name change, I assume (as told by your sales team) that her PAN number will undergo name change and possibly the linked bank account as well. The PAN number itself will remain the same. So, does it mean that her stock savings will automatically get allocated to new name once we provide the new details. This will not force us to write to different registrars etc. and there will be no questions of capital gain etc. (b) Additionally, can we have nomination to her trading and demat accounts ? Thanks in advance

Reply

Hi Naresh,

(a) Post wedding, you can get the names updated in our records by submitting a copy of the new PAN card. This will have no effect on your holdings whatsoever or the corporate actions your daughter is entitled to receive.

(b) Yes, if you look at the demat form, you'll find the nomination sheet there, you'll have to fill the data and submit the form to us.

Hi,

I am totally new to shares.

So i understood from this chapter that I should invest 70% in shares.

Now out of those 70% in which company sector i should subdivide is there any guideline on that.

Example Banks , Real estate , etc

- 1) How many different sectors to invest in
- 2) What ratio ?
- 3) How many companies one should invest it ?

As user who is having day job , tracking many companies and sectors is difficult.

Reply

- o  Karthik Rangappa says:
December 10, 2016 at 4:37 pm

Firstly, when you invest, invest for long term. In this case, you need not have to track the prices daily. As far as diversification is concerned...you can consider a portfolio of 12-15 stocks..with not more than 2 stocks from the same sector.

- 1) In the first table it is mentioned that the total income is 17,890,693. From where this value came ?
- 2) In the second table the Total cash after 20 years is mentioned as 4,26,95,771 , how is it calculated ?

Reply

- o  Karthik Rangappa says:
January 25, 2015 at 8:08 am

Firs year cash retain is Rs.240,000 which will be invest for 20 year @ 12%. To figure out how much this will grow to after 20 years, we need to apply the CAGR formula which is –

Amount after 'n' year = Amount Invested *(1 + Growth Rate) raised to the power of 'n' years.

$$= 240000 * (1 + 12\%)^{20}$$

$$= \text{Rs.}20,67,063/-$$

Likewise the next year retain cash is Rs.271,200/- which will be invested for 19 years –

$$= 271200 * (1 + 12\%)^{19}$$

$$= \text{Rs.}20,85,515/-$$

So on and so forth.

Shankar, the calculation assumes that the money is accumulated at the end of every year and gets invested over the 20 year period. Hence for the first year the accumulated money gets invested for 19 years, not 20. Likewise for the 2nd year it gets invested for 18 years. So on and so forth. I guess this is where the difference is coming about. Of course, I have not conveyed this point across in the discussion above, will make the necessary edits. Thanks for pointing this.

The average works like this –

Buy 20 @ 100 = 2000

Buy 10 @ 200 = 2000

Total investment = 2000 + 2000 = 4000

Total Quantity = 20 + 10 = 30

Average = 4000/30

That is roughly the long term average CAGR of the top 20 – 25 mutual funds in India. You can find plenty of research on this online.

Didn't know it, sorry.
Isn't the first row wrong then?

First rows in both the images still haven't been corrected- Zerodha's well wisher

Commas are put for ease of reading and isn't compulsory. The first row is readable the way its written.

Hello Karthik,

I am one of your clients id being RT0542. i have been connected to zerodha for the past 1.5 years and I really appreciate zerodha's initiative to spread financila literacy through zerodha varsity.

I am currently pursuing my MBA from IIM Rohtak and planning to make videos of the modules and chapters and upload it on youtube.

I just wanted to know if I can use the content of varsity in my videos and promote financial literacy as in, am I allowed to do so or is this illegal.

Waiting for a positive reply, as I really want to spread this knowledge. And any kind of help or guidance with this regard will be really appreciated.

Regards

Tanmay Mondal

Hi Karthik,

I am new to this trading world.I don't know what exactly it is,but am very much passionate about trading and investment.

Can you please provide references of the best video tutorials to learn ,as a layman to trading world i can't simply understand this tutorial.

Regards
Sairam

I m saying that I did not understand that second table where cash retained investment had been shown. I did not get where those amounts of cash retained investments had come from. Pls explain.

- Karthik Rangappa says:
June 20, 2018 at 12:03 pm

Cash retained is the difference between the yearly income and yearly expense.

Some numbers are in English numbering system e.g.
600,000 360,000 240,000 Total Income 17,890,693

While elsewhere it is Indian number system. They need to be consistent.
